Any interested students are welcome, but due to the nature of the course, graduate students who have already got involved in research work in chemistry or related field are preferred.
課程概述與目標：
This course is meant to acquire skills for scientific writing and presentation. Clear communication in English is now a requirement, not an option, for a good scientist. However, it is not an easy task for us ESL students and researchers to write a correct, logical research paper in English and to give a clear poster/oral presentation. We will learn the basic structure of scientific research papers and writing principles through many composition exercises. We will also investigate effective ways of presentation that allow us to deliver our thoughts and scientific results to others. Although this course is not intended to be a "language course", some important details about grammar and style are taught as well.
